Maintenance Related TOSHA Standards

Maintenance personnel are responsible for, or have a hand in, many activities covered by TOSHA standards. In this seminar TOSHA inspectors will provide you with insights they have gained over years of enforcing the regulations. Since maintenance workers have responsibilities all over a facility, they are often in a position to affect the exposures of many employees to a variety of workplace hazards. Recognition of hazards and application of safe work practices by maintenance workers is crucial to keeping a work environment safe and healthful for workers.

Who Should Attend?

This workshop is designed for an obvious audience—maintenance personnel. These are the employees who are responsible for correcting non-compliance areas and for maintaining machines, equipment and systems in a manner that will guarantee continuous compliance. It's easy to point out what is wrong, but it is another matter to make things right and keep them that way. This workshop will help maintenance people achieve the results that are necessary to insure continuous compliance. Of course, anyone who has any TOSHA compliance responsibility can benefit from this workshop.
